Improvements at College.

Work is being rushed rapidly on the handsome new entrance gate to the college campus. The gate is being presented by the class of 1893 and will cost about $1500. The college is having a concrete pavement laid from the gate to the bridge and a new brick sidewalk from there to the double frame dwelling near the Reading depot.

The Senior Class began last week the construction of a new concrete walk from Old Dorm to Gladfelter Hall. It will run at the side of main drive, and at the entrance to Gladfelter Hall the class will erect two large electric light standards.

The campus and every part of the College property will be put in the best possible condition for Commencement and the Anniversary Celebration.

Cases Affirmed.

The case of Chas. Fiske vs James E. Kissinger, in which a verdict for plaintiff was rendered for $108 and which defendant appealed to Superior Court was affirmed on Monday.

MONEY FOR CELEBRATION

GOVERNOR TENER SIGNS THE APPROPRIATION BILLS.

State Commission Fixes May 15 16 at Gettysburg as Date of Their Final Meeting.

Pennsylvania, upon whose soil the great decisive battle of the Civil War was fought, Pennsylvania, the Keystone in the arch of the United States, Pennsylvania, the host at the great Celebration of the 50th Anniversary of the Battle of Gettysburg, has made provision for the money necessary that the State may act the part of host. On last Friday Governor Tener signed the two bills appropriating a total sum of $260,000 for the great event.

With $55,000 previously appropriated by the State and $150,000 appropriated by the nation, there is more than a half million dollars to make ready for the coming of the veterans to the Celebration. Add to this sum New York's appropriation and the total is up to $850,000, and with nearly every state making some provision the total to be expended by states and nation will be in excess of a million dollars.

Think of it! A million dollars in sight for the Celebration of the Union, cemented in blood at Gettysburg and the half century of peace enjoyed since. The only excuse for the Celebration is the inspirational thought of union and peace. This is recognized by the plans of the Commission that the spending of the money will be made worthwhile by the corner stone laying of a Peace Memorial at high noon on July 4. Much curiosity exists as to the nature and character of this memorial, what form it will take and from what source the money will come. Without such a permanent memorial there would be nothing left here to tell the story of the event and its significance.

The appropriation bills approved by the Governor cover the following provisions. The State originally designated that the limit for the purposes of the Commission should be $250,000. Of this $55,000 was appropriated in the first bill, and $50,000 was made available in the second bill. One of the bills of last week appropriated $195,000 the balance of the original amount $150,000 of this goes to the National government for the preparation and expenses of the veterans' camp.

The second appropriation bill approved last week provides $165,000 for the transportation of Pennsylvania veterans and veterans living within the State and Pennsylvania veterans outside the State to and from the State line. As many veterans live within a short distance from Gettysburg it is likely that the average cost of transportation will not exceed a sum between $5 and $6 and the appropriation made will provide for from 30,000 to 35,000 veterans from Pennsylvania, about seventy per cent. of the veterans of the State on the pension rolls. With New York's transportation provision taking care of 20,000 to 25,000, and this less than fifty per cent. of the veterans living in that State, the camp being prepared for 40,000 veterans would be filled beyond its capacity with the veterans from these two states. And there are veterans from 46 other states and some few who are not veterans and have been born since the war who will be here.

The Pennsylvania Commission had a meeting at Harrisburg last Friday and the word given out was that the arrangements for the great reunion will go forward with a rush. The Commission named Governor Tener, Colonel James N. Schoonmaker, chairman, Captain George F. Baer and Captain John P. Green as a committee to arrange a tentative program for the celebration and contracts were authorized to be let for a tent to hold over 12,000 persons.

The Commission authorized a call to the representatives of the National and State governments in charge of preparations for the observance next July to meet at Gettysburg on May 15 16 at which time the final arrangements for the big gathering of veterans will be made. On that occasion each State will be asked to give the exact number of veterans who will attend. The apportionment of space by states in the big camp to accommodate 40,000 veterans will follow immediately after the number of visitors is ascertained. Representatives from the State Constabulary and Department of Health visited Gettysburg last week. It is likely that the hospital for the general public will be located along the brick yard or Winebrenner's lane on play ground land.

Sites for the comfort stations and latrines were investigated with the assistance of the committee of Town Council and the following places were selected for their location: One on South street at the Roman corner; one on West Middle street at the Court House; one on Stratton street at St.

The Western Maryland is rushing work enlarging their yard here, having brought here nearly one hundred men to be engaged in the work.

T. P. Turner, who has the contract for lighting the camp has erected over 1,000 poles and is ready to begin the wiring.

Work at the camp is rapidly progressing. Two of the wells are finished and the other two are going down daily many feet. A number of latrines have been erected and the camp site is taking on a busy appearance.

Taking Pasteur Treatment.

Charles W. Myers, local agent of the W. M. R. R. is taking the Pasteur treatment here under Dr. Henry Stewart for a wound on wrist inflicted by a pet dog, "Rockus" the pet fox terrier of Mr. Myers was easily the best trained dog in the town, developing an unusual intelligence. At command of Mr. Myers he would go through a number of tricks, if directed to count he would give as many short barks as were named in the order given him. On Sunday, April 18 he had some trouble to swallow and Mr. Myers in examining his throat received a scratch from one of his teeth on his wrist. On Tuesday of last week the dog disappeared and was found next day at Hunterstown. Brought home and placed in a room he was watched. On last Thursday the dog was killed by order of Dr. E. D. Hudson. The body was sent to the State laboratories, at Philadelphia and on Friday a telegram was received stating that the dog had been suffering from rabies. The dog evidently contracted the rabies from a bite from another dog on the streets of the town. A one hundred day dog quarantine has been ordered, Burgess Holtzworth for the town and Dr. Hudson for State having charge of the quarantine. The quarantine will provide that all unmuzzled dogs be kept off the streets for the hundred day period. Dogs on which the usual tax has not been paid and which are not wearing the dog tags will be liable to be shot even though they are muzzled.

Work at Federal Building Stops.

The carvers on the marble work at the Federal building stopped work on last Friday afternoon. It is said that the bondsmen of the contractor, A. B. Stannard, gave notice to the government to make no further payments to the contractor. The carving contract was with the company furnishing the stone but it is alleged that the action of bondsmen brought about a stoppage of all work. Last week a carload of marble intended for interior work consigned to A. B. Stannard was attached under foreign attachments, two from Justice of the Peace Harnish for bills of C. M. Wolf for $250.79 and Wm. H. Tipton for $45. A third foreign attachment was issued from the Court for the Gettysburg Department store for $190.54.

Business Changes.

John M. Warner, who holds the record at the present time of being longer in business than any other business man now actively engaged, 32 years, sold his notion store last week to Jacob Trimmer of Carlisle. All the goods have been boxed and shipped away. Mr. Warner has always been in business on Baltimore street and for the past 25 years at the present site. He built his present store building a quarter of a century ago and last year erected a handsome residence and will retire from active mercantile life and rent his store room.

The Gettysburg Dept. Store has placed a handsome glass front in their store on Baltimore street. Two large windows cover the entire front with a single door in the center. The change adds greatly to the store.

The improvements in the Hammond Building on Centre Square are well advanced and Ward Stallsmith will have a news store room the equal of any to be found in large cities. The room will have a glass front along the entire side facing the Square.

MARRIAGES.

MANGES-BLOCHER-On last Wednesday noon at the home of the bride, Miss M. Grace Blocher, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank D. Blocher, of Carlisle St., and Rev. Edmund L. Manges, of Champaign, Illinois, formerly of York, were married by Rev. Edmund Manges, father of the groom assisted by Dr. George M. Dillenderfer, of Carlisle, an uncle of the bride. The ceremony took place in the parlor beautifully decorated with Killarney roses, ferns and southern smilax. The bride and groom were unattended. The Lohegrin and Mendelssohn wedding marches were played by Miss Nellie Blocher, sister of the bride. The double ring service was used. Miss Blocher wore a gown of duchess satin made with train, and trimmed with duchess lace and brilliants. She wore a veil, caught with sweet peas and brilliants, and carried a shower bouquet of white and pink sweet peas.

Mrs. Manges will take up their future residence at Champaign, Ill., where the Rev. Mr. Manges is pastor of a Lutheran church and also college pastor at the University of Illinois. Both bride and bridegroom are graduates of the 1908 class of Pennsylvania college, Gettysburg.

IRVIN-HALL-A beautiful wedding was solemnized at St Ignatius Church, Buchanan Valley, Wednesday, April 18, when Miss Emma, daughter of Mrs. Elizabeth Hall, became the bride of Wm J. Irvin. The bride entered the church on the arm of her brother John F. Hall, the groomsmen. Miss Virginia Irvin, sister of the groom was bridesmaid. The bride was beautifully attired in all-over lace voile and wore a white picture hat. She carried a shower bouquet of white carnations and fern. The bridesmaid also wore white, with pink sash, and carried pink carnations. The color scheme was pink and white. Mr. Irvin is a charming young lady with many friends. Mr. Irvin is a prosperous young farmer. They will move to their newly furnished home on one of his father's farms.

92nd Birthday.

Our venerable townsman, Dr. John W. C. O'Neal, completed his 92nd year yesterday. Only recently has he shown a weariness of length of years. For more than four score and ten years he was blessed with vigorous health, a robust constitution and use of every faculty. The beloved physician will long be cherished by the families and the children of the families, into whose homes he came in times of sickness, to so efficiently relieve and comfort them. His entrance into the sick room was a benison, even without his medicines. He was so quick to grasp the situation and to administer the appropriate remedy. He brought with him the sunshine of his love, that was itself a tonic to the patient. His gentle manliness yielded peace and comfort. He was an ardent lover of his profession, being a diligent student of its learning to the last days of his practice and kept step with all its beneficent progress. He has given a bright example for his contemporaries and successors in the profession to follow.

Town Council Activities.

The Town council had a special meeting last Thursday and agreed to the location of the comfort stations in the town.

The motion prevailed instructing the burgess to take all precautions necessary for a dog quarantine and the muzzling of dogs.

The Council also instructed the Burgess to enforce ordinance prohibiting the sale and use of fireworks within borough on Fourth of July. On account of the great crowds here during the celebration it was deemed unwise to add to the danger the use of fireworks. Part of the celebration planned is fireworks at camp on evening of the Fourth and it was decided that that would give enough display of fireworks.

It was reported that a representative of the Tarvia company would come to the town at an early day to consult with authorities about oiling or treatment of streets.

Tax exonerations occupied much time.

Church Re-dedicated.

St. Paul's Lutheran Church, Biglerville will be re-dedicated next Sunday April 27. An addition 50 x 40 feet for a Sunday School room has been built. A new and massive tower has been added. The audience room has been remodeled, decorated, and carpeted. New cathedral stained glass windows are in place, the two gable windows having life sized figures, one "Christ Knocking at the Door", the other, "Christ the Good Shepherd." New pews, pulpit, furniture and a steam heating plant have been included among the improvements. The Church was organized in 1851 with 21 members and now has 200 members. The re-opening service will begin this Wednesday evening April 23. Thursday evening Rev. C. W. Baker, of New Oxford will preach. Rev. D. T. Keser will occupy pulpit Friday evening and Rev. Geo. M. Dillenderfer, D. D. Pres of West Pa. Synod will preach Saturday evening, Sunday morning and evening.

L. M. Buehler's New Departure.

After two months of remarkable sales, L. M. Buehler, the enterprising druggist, says that his plan of selling at half price the regular 50 cent size of Dr. Howard's specific for the cure of constipation and dyspepsia, and guaranteeing to refund the money if it does not cure, has been the greatest success he has ever known.

Anyone suffering with dyspepsia, constipation, liver troubles, headaches, dizziness, coated tongue, or the general tired feeling caused by inactive liver and bowels or disordered digestion, should take advantage of L. M. Buehler's new departure and have a

Two Automobile Catechisms--Free

HERE are the first real automobile catechisms ever published. They are just what the title signifies---books on elementary automobile principles. These books are not the average run of dry technical matter. They were written by an automobile authority who not only understands the automobile, but, what is more important, understands and can make clear to you the very things that seem confusing, complex and intricate.

Purchasing Advice

The first book informs you on values; how to measure and judge cars. Explanations are clear, logical and convincing

For instance—you must know which rear axle construction is best: for the finest motor made is helpless with an inefficient rear system. Then you should know whether that motor is full powered; an under-powered car is a fatal buy no matter how excellent the materials. You must go into brake construction and spring suspension; ascertain where drop forgings are imperative—and get information on dozens of other vital points.

This book explains production economies. For example: The expense of a certain new tool equipment amounting to $100,000 means $20 per car to the manufacturer of 5,000 cars. But as we produce 40,000 cars a year it means only $2.50 per car. Thus the advantages, results and economies of manufacturing cars in great quantities are explained. When you have finished reading this book you will understand why we can market a completely equipped, 30 horsepower, five-passenger touring car for $985. The duplicate of this car cannot be had from any other manufacturer for less than $1200.

Operating Advice

The little gray covered book teaches you the knacks of good driving. Every thing is explained in simple, understandable language. It is not one bit technical. Your wife—even the young people of the family—will find it very interesting reading. It will aid the most experienced motorist.

Here are some of the chapters: "How to Start the Motor", "How to Start the Car", "The Best Way to Turn Corners", "Rules of the Road", "How to Find a Missing Cylinder", "Tire Care", etc. Each point, from starting to stopping, is covered, and covered thoroughly. It even describes the best methods for washing and polishing; it tells how to overcome a car's tendency to skid.

Had this book been issued by a publisher as a money maker, it would cost you several dollars. There are nearly 100 pages in it and scarcely one lacks a diagram. There are about 175 drawings in all. One is of double page size, illustrating most clearly the means of proper lubrication.

It does not matter if you have not yet bought your automobile. Get this book; it will pay a dividend of knowledge.

We are giving this book away merely because we want you to know the difference between good and bad automobiles. After you have read it you will be impressed with what a fine, big, practical and useful car the Overland is.

IN RE PANAMA CANAL TOLLS

POSITION OF U. S. ON AMERICAN COASTWISE VESSELS.

United States Should Make Good Treaty Promises of Equal Terms for all.

The Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, invite the attention to the following statement concerning the grave international discussion which has arisen over the exemption of American coastwise vessels from tolls on the Panama Canal:

On November 18, 1901, a treaty "to facilitate the construction of a ship canal to connect the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans" was concluded between the United States and Great Britain, at the request and on the initiative of the United States. The essential provisions of the treaty were (1) that "the canal be constructed under the auspices of the Government of the United States," and that "the said Government shall have and enjoy all the rights incident to such construction, as well as the exclusive right of providing for the regulation and management of the canal"; (2) that "the canal shall be free and open to the vessels of commerce and of war of all nations observing these Rules, on terms of entire equality"; (3) that the plant for operating the canal and the canal itself shall be "neutralized," and shall enjoy complete immunity from attack or injury by belligerents; (4) that the United States shall be at liberty to maintain an adequate military police along the canal; and (5) that "no change of territorial sovereignty or of the international relations of the country or countries traversed by the before-mentioned canal shall affect the general principle of neutralization or the obligation of the High Contracting Parties under the present Treaty."

The concluding of this treaty—commonly spoken of as the Hay-Pauncefote Treaty—was a necessary preliminary to the construction of any isthmian canal by the United States or under its auspices: because by a previous convention between the same parties concluded in April, 1850, the United States and Great Britain had bound themselves that neither would "ever obtain or maintain for itself any exclusive control over" an isthmian canal or "maintain any fortifications commanding the same," or exercise dominion over "any part of Central America." The contracting parties further agreed to protect the canal from "interruption, seizure, or unjust confiscation," and to guarantee its neutrality.

This convention—commonly spoken of as the Clayton-Bulwer Treaty—made at the request and on the initiative of the United States, established the general principle of the neutralization of any isthmian canal which might be constructed, a principle which the Hay-Pauncefote Treaty reaffirmed.

The great design of both treaties, that of 1850 and that of 1901, was to promote the construction and maintenance of a ship canal between the two oceans, for "the benefit of mankind, on equal terms to all," and to protect the neutralized canal effectively when built. In urging on the British Government the making of the Clayton-Bulwer Treaty, the American negotiator said to Lord Palmerston: "The United States sought no exclusive privilege or preferential right of any kind in regard to the proposed communication [that is, a canal or railroad], and their sincere wish, if it should be found practicable, was to see it dedicated to the common use of all nations on the most liberal terms and a footing of perfect equality for all. That the United States would not, if they could, obtain any exclusive right or privilege in a great highway which naturally belonged to all mankind." This statement expresses accurately the avowed intention and resolve of the United States from 1850 to 1912 concerning any Panama Canal. All treaties on the subject are based on this intention and resolve, many times reiterated by official representatives of the American Government.

In the summer of 1912 Congress passed a bill fixing the tolls to be paid for passing through the Panama Canal—constructed by the United States—and approaching completion—but added a section which exempted American coastwise vessels from paying tolls, thus giving American coastwise vessels a privilege which no other vessels would enjoy, and diminishing the probable income of the canal in operation.

After an interval of several months, Great Britain has presented to the Government of the United States a protest against the exemption of American coastwise vessels on two principal grounds. First, that such an exemption is inconsistent with the provision of the Hay-Pauncefote Treaty that the canal shall be open to vessels of all nations on terms of entire equality; and secondly, that the exemption of American coastwise vessels would inevitably tend to increase the charges on all other vessels using the canal, to the disadvantage of all other nations in comparison with the United States, a disadvantage which might increase in the future, since the higher the rates the greater would be the privilege of exemption from paying them.

The British arguments are calm and free from exaggeration, and prove that the action of Congress in exempting American coastwise vessels from the payment of canal tolls involves a construction of the Hay-Pauncefote Treaty which is fairly open to question. A difference has arisen concerning the interpretation of the treaty.

On the 4th of April, 1908, the United States and Great Britain made an other treaty in which they agreed that "differences which may arise of a legal nature or relating to the interpretation of treaties existing between the two Contracting Parties and which it may not have been possible to settle by diplomacy, shall be referred to the Permanent Court of Arbitration established at The Hague by the Convention of the 24th of July, 1899, provided, nevertheless, that they do not affect the vital interests, the independence, or the honor of the two Contracting States, and do not concern the interests of third Parties." The question whether American coastwise vessels shall pay tolls for passing through the canal cannot possibly be said to affect either nation's vital interests or independence, or the "honor" of either of the two governments. Clearly, a difference relating to the interpretation of a treaty has arisen between two governments which have agreed to submit such differences to The Hague Court of Arbitration.

In a special sense the United States is bound to observe faithfully and without question the treaty of April 1908; for the United States has been among governments the great advocate of arbitration, has practiced it in important cases, and has urged it strongly on all other governments. The United States cannot refuse to arbitrate the difference which has arisen concerning the proper interpretation of the Hay-Pauncefote Treaty without turning its back on a very honorable chapter in its own history, and damaging throughout the world the cause of free institutions. The Republic ought to be the most scrupulous of all governments in the observance of treaty obligations. It must be absolutely faithful to its word, even to its own hurt.

Assuming that the difference which has arisen concerning the construction of the Hay-Pauncefote Treaty must be arbitrated under the cause of the difference can be withdrawn, we desire to urge on our fellow-citizens the expediency of promptly repealing that action of Congress which gave rise to the difficulty.

Granting that some American shipping interests might be benefited by the exemption of coastwise vessels from canal tolls, since the term coastwise now includes voyages half round the globe, America surely has much larger interests which would be greatly saved by the prompt abandonment of any interpretation of the Hay-Pauncefote Treaty against which Great Britain can enter a reasonable protest. The United States has an immense interest in the sanctity of contracts, and in the strict observance of all international conventions and treaties. It has an immense interest in the faithful observance of any treaty between two or more nations which has been entered into "for the benefit of mankind." It is true that in times past many treaties have not been strictly observed; that others have been suffered to lapse quietly; and that some have been violated by one or more of the parties, too impatient to wait for a new convention. Despotism and monarchical governments have often sinned in these respects, and republics have been accused of like conduct. All the more reason that the American Republic should do no act under a treaty which can be even questioned by candid and honorable men. In the efficacy of international agreements lies the chief hope of the world for progressive civilization.

The further promotion, in a method of uncertain value, of the interests of American coastwise shipping, interests already protected by the possession of a complete monopoly as against all other nations, is a doubtful matter of commercial improvement. The whole country considered, the pecuniary advantage would not be large, and might easily be completely offset by accompanying disadvantages; but whatever advantage might come to this well-protected industry, it would be as nothing compared with the interests of the whole United States in carrying out the noble work of building a canal between the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans for the common advantage of all nations.

The greatest interest of the United States as a free nation is to represent worthily before the world the principles of civil and religious liberty and the public efficiency and well-being which those principles develop, and thereby to promote the adoption of these principles the world over. This is a great material as well as a great moral interest. In comparison with this large interest, the interest of the United States in its coastwise vessels sinks into insignificance. By securing the repeal of that part of the act of Congress on the Panama Canal which provided for the exemption of American coastwise vessels from the payment of tolls, the American people would embrace a precious opportunity to prove that they understand their highest interest, and recognize their duty to promote it "for the benefit of mankind."

Sanity in Exercise.

Exercise is something that is to be enjoyed, not taken as a duty. The business man tired out by a day's work at his desk, carries his weariness to the point of exhaustion by rushing through twenty minutes of gymnasium work, when if he had walked a few blocks to his office instead of having used the trolley car, he would be in much better health. Gymnasium work and setting-up exercises in the morning are in many cases good as stimulants, but they cannot be compared in beneficial results with a brisk walk or a game of golf, or a few minutes swim.

There are few exercises that are as good as walking. One, two or three hours on Sundays and holidays spent in this way rest the nervous system and act as a splendid tonic. Walk to and from work. Walk briskly, for a brisk walk means exercise for the heart and lungs as well as for the muscles. The act of going up stairs is a vigorous exercise, especially for the heart, and when done with trunk erect, chest expanded and flexible play of the foot is excellent.

Outdoor exercise is always to be preferred to indoor exercise, and exercise that can be made part of the routine life to that which requires apparatus and is likely to be temporary and discontinued after a time. Therefore avail yourself of every opportunity to exercise out of doors in a natural way.

$1 Gun Tax Now a Law.

The Davis hunter's license bill has become a law in Pennsylvania by Governor Tener's approval of it last week and hereafter no one may hunt except upon land owned or leased by him unless he takes out a license costing a dollar and displays upon his sleeve a tag bearing the number of his license.

The measure was advocated by many men interested in hunting, especially by members of the State Game Commission and by the United Sportsmen and other organizations, and strenuously opposed by the Hunters and Anglers as infringing upon individual rights. The bill has been before the legislature since January 29 and after several hearings was reported from the House Game Committee on April 1. It was presented by Representative Albert Davis of Scranton, and backed by him, Representatives D. F. Kennedy and John F. Lowers of Allegheny, in the debates before the committee and in the House. The Senate made amendments to it in some minor particulars and the House concurred.

Under the provision of the bill it applies to all citizens of the State and their sons. Residents of other States are now required to take out licenses and foreigners not naturalized are not allowed to bear firearms.

The license costs a dollar and may be taken out before any county treasurer or a justice of the peace upon written application. No person under 14 may be licensed and no one under 16 without consent of parent or guardian, in writing. In addition to the license there is to be issued a tag bearing the license number in figures at least one inch in height, to be worn upon the arm between elbow and shoulder so as to be seen while the holder of the license is hunting.

Violation of the act is made punishable by a fine of $20, but the act is not to apply to any person having a gun in his home and using it in self-defense or for shooting at a target or any bona fide owner or lessee of lands or member of family of such person from hunting on his own lands.

Possession of any gun or hunting device is to be considered as prima facie evidence of hunting, and persons hunting must display license to any officer protecting game or owner or lessee of land upon which any hunter may be found. The penalty of $20 is to apply to any person refusing to show a license and in possession of a gun or dead body of game.

The index of licenses is to be kept open to the public by county treasurers and the Game Commission. The county treasurers are to retain 10 cents for services in connection with each license and remit balances to the State Treasurer monthly and to constitute a fund for protection and propagation of game.

Any officer whose duty it is to protect game or preserve the peace has the right to arrest without warrant violators of the act and to seize all paraphernalia, and upon conviction all confiscated property goes to the State, subject to the orders of the Game Commissioners, the game to be forwarded to the most convenient hospital. Under certain conditions the paraphernalia may be sold by the State.

Besides the general contents, there are maps and over 600 subjects beautifully illustrated by three-color plates, numerous subjects by monotypes, 16 pages of educational charts and the latest United States Census.

The $3.00 book, precisely the same as the $4.00 book except in the style of binding, which is in half-leather, with olive edges and square corners, will be mailed for the six coupons and $1.00, including postage.

The $2.00 book, in plain cloth binding, stamped in gold and black, which has the same paper and illustrations, but with the color plates and charts omitted, will be sent for six coupons and 70 cents.

The Record is to be commended in its promotion of this offer, presenting every one with a valuable adjunct to their educational opportunities at a minimum of cost.

YEAR BOOK of Stark Bro's Nurseries & Orchards Co. MAILED TO YOU FREE

Just say on a Postal Card: "Send me a copy of Stark Year Book for 1913." When writing, also tell us how many trees, shrubs, vines, etc., you will probably plant this season.

This Year Book is more than a mere catalogue of Stark nursery products, it is a practical, easy to understand text book for the guidance of the man who plants trees. Our own experience of nearly 100 years, the reports of experiment stations and the opinions of planters from all sections are condensed and reproduced for the benefit of busy people. An encyclopedia of orchard information, containing full size color illustrations of gloriously tinted fruits and many photographic reproductions in black and white; also information on many subjects in which the orchardist is interested.

Hundreds of varieties of apples, pears, peach, plum, cherry, apricot, quince, grape and all small fruits are described; weaknesses of each variety are pointed out and good points are explained. We feel that planters should know both.

Those interested in growing fruits or flowers or shrubs or shade trees will find this book of inestimable value; totally different from the average nurseryman's publications. It is a book you will keep for reference, and one on which you can depend as being absolutely accurate. Write today for your copy.

Farmer, Telephone and Freight Office

There must be times when the work on the farm is halted because a machine has broken down, when a new part or something essential to the farm equipment has been ordered from the city and has not turned up.

To have a Bell Telephone, to call the Freight Depot, to find out when to send over for the shipment, saves many a fruitless trip and waste of time. Every farm should have a telephone.

Write the nearest Business Office for illustrated booklet, "What Uncle Sam Says About the Rural Telephone."

Her Return

It Was Long Delayed

By CLARISSA MACKIE

For three long years Genet Saville had nursed a bitter resentment against her husband. During this time there was ever before her the mental picture of their quarrel and the parting. The recollection of his white, contemptuous face always stung her to fresh hatred of him. She could hear his low spoken acrid reply to her upbraiding. The few words that had sent her fleeing from the room and later from his house with all the quick passion of her southern nature stirred to its depths.

She had sought solitude in an obscure Swiss hamlet. She, who was without kinsfolk, had cut herself loose from the only tie that bound her to her world. She had not seen a familiar face nor heard the sound of a well-known voice in all those thirty-six months. She had not read a newspaper nor heard any tidings of the old life. Her private fortune, in negotiable securities, afforded her every material comfort. She had music and books, her favorite dog and little thoughts.

Three years, thirty-six months, a thousand days, and more, ages ago since their parting in the library. Never had she once longed for the sound of Norman's voice, for the sight of his face, for reconciliation. She hated him for his outburst that night, hated him for his cold contempt of her "heroics," as he called it. Always she would remember him as she had last seen him, cold and stern and bitter, with no love for her. She fed her soul on these unwholesome reflections.

Then one lovely morning Genet climbed up the verdant upland pastures reclaimed from the rough mountain-sides. She paused in the shadow of a dark clothed pine tree, inhaling the pure air and gazing in the panorama of mountain and valley, pine forest and distant glacier, when close beside her there sprang into view a tableau—a young dairy farmer and his sweetheart.

Genet had often watched the peasants, her fair face amusedly contemptuous of their crude loveliness. This man might have been Norman's twin brother—handsome, clean cut, gray eyed, brown skinned. The girl was fresh and sweet and fair. She was in his arms, and his firmly moulded chin was pressed against the parting of her golden hair.

Genet watched them, a strange new feeling leaping to her heart, to her heart—a white flame of jealousy that seared her wounds—the bitterness, the anger against her husband. Her pulses throbbled, and the blood flew to her cheeks. She watched the man's face wistfully, hungrily, as one who looks on a beloved forgotten picture and revels in the wonderment of rediscovery.

The face of the man was curiously like that of Norman—the finely shaped head with its closely brushed chestnut hair, the straight nose, the resolute mouth now softened into tenderness. The steadfast gray eyes, deep set and black lashed, were fixed on the girl's face, shyly lifted to his and exquisite in its virginal purity of expression.

So Norman must have looked at her when he had told Genet of his love.

Genet drew back among the pine-boughs and leaned her face against the rough bark of the tree. She was trembling with long controlled emotion, deliciously thrilled at the wild promptings of her wayward heart. Impetuously she had withdrawn from her husband, too hurt to render him justice. As passionately would she return to him and heap the smothered riches of her love and a lifelong devotion at his feet to repay for his suffering, his regret, his loneliness, for he would have suffered keenly, he who worshipped the ground she trod. All the world should know that she who had left him in anger without due reason acknowledged her mistake and had returned to him.

After awhile she descended to the village, singing all the way to the tiny chalet where she lived. The simple peasants among whom she had spent her exile looked after her and wondered and smilingly agreed with one another that the sad faced lady had found happiness after all.

All the nightmare of Genet's nurtured resentment which had robbed her of three years of life was banished by her preparations for immediate departure. Now that she saw herself in the wrong she chafed to be humiliated before her husband in expiation of her sin.

Arrived in New York and settled in a hotel under an assumed name, she called a cab and motored slowly past the town house. As she expected, it was closed and shuttered. She looked up at the familiar windows with dim eyes and registered a vow to live more earnestly, more worthily, if she was permitted to go back.

The next day the train carried her down to Fairfields, where she entered the ancient Surrey which served all transportation purposes for the casual traveler.

Leaving the sleepy village, the Surrey rolled lazily along the sandy, wooded roads under tall growing white oaks and chestnuts.

Genet sat with clinched hands and tense lips watching the sand drift in golden streams over the tires, conscious of the intoxicating summer scents, acutely responsive to the jingles in the thrush's tender song. The driver bumped drowsily on the front seat and slumped at the flies on the broad backed horse. It was a ride to be remembered for its suspense.

At the stone pillared entrance to Fairfields Genet dismissed the carriage and entered the winding avenue that led to the house, a half mile distant, on the very edge of the bluffs overlooking the sound.

The house must be open, for there were recent tracks of broad tires in the drive. The gate lodge was tenanted by curious heads lurked behind the curtains. She wondered if Mrs. Lee and her lame husband still lived at the lodge. She longed to stop and talk to them and thus bring herself immediately into the swing of the old life.

Her slender, girlish figure was clad in pale blue linen coat and gown, with a veil the same tint shrouding her white hat. She stepped across the turf with eager feet, her charming face now rose red with anticipation, now its pale with sudden dread.

The low, rambling house lay quiet in the hot sunshine. The broad verandas, awninged and vineclad, seemed to be deserted. Her glance wandered to the launch. The party had boarded here and were lounging in wicker chairs about the deck. Norman was at the wheel. She saw his backward glance at the house. The whistle tooted impudently, and they were away, cutting the water into a thousand twinkling lights and a shower of falling spray.

When they had rounded the point she hurried across the drive and entered the veranda. There was a litter of smoking things on convenient tables, heaps of sporting papers and gayly covered magazines. A siphon, a decanter and a tray of empty glasses were on a round table and beside recent refreshment. It was very like old times when she had gone away for a few weeks and left Norman to hold bachelor revels with old cronies. She smiled at the disorder. It was all so natural that the past three years were blotted out as if they had never been. She was merely returning home from a day's shopping in the hot town.

Thus she deluded herself. The wide, cool hall was quite deserted. The polished floor gave back blurred reflections of the heavy furniture. The huge fireplace was crowded with fresh branches of fragrant bayberry. The library door was closed, but other open doorways offered cool vistas of drawing rooms, billiard and dining rooms. The stairs wound in a broad spiral to the second floor.

Genet paused, her eyes lingering on each well known object. There was no change in the arrangement of furniture. Even the hatrack bore its customary heterogeneous array of coats and caps, riding crops, golf sticks and tennis rackets. With a quick nervous gesture she threw back her veil and turned to the library. Before she sought her own apartments she would peep in here. And now the creeping fear at her heart found shape and suggestion.

If her portrait, the one Giddy had painted, still hung over the fireplace in the library, then all would be well; Norman would be forgiving, would relent. His mother's picture had graced that space until Norman married, and then it had given place to Genet's. And now that she had forfeited her right would it be there? If not she would steal away from the house and never return. The answer to her questioning heart lay behind the closed door.

Suddenly she turned the knob and slipped inside, closing the door softly behind her. Then she leaned panting with emotion against its mahogany surface.

The long room lay in shadow save for one sunny window at the farther end. Here a high backed winged chair was placed.

She fell to trembling as she heard the flicker of a turning page behind the winged chair. In the silence it seemed as if her heart throbs would betray her presence. In her joyful imaginings of her return to her husband there were no such fearful terror and apprehension as came upon her now. Her gloved hands wrung together in a supreme effort for control. Suddenly a little sigh of relief escaped her. Perhaps no one was in the room after all!

Then, as if her sigh had been heard, a voice came from the chair, a voice of quiet inquiry, Norman's voice.

"Who is there?"

Genet's lips were dumb. "Who is there?" he repeated. And after another silence the winged chair creaked with his uprising. Genet's glance flashed to the fireplace for courage and reassurance, and then a great joy came into her dark eyes.

Her portrait was there in its place and beneath it a vase of fresh violets.

Norman came down the room, his eyes half blinded by the sudden change from the sunlit window to the gloom of the room. Genet saw that his smooth chestnut of his hair was streaked with silver; that his face was worn, and his eyes were weary. Then the supreme moment came when he saw her and recognized her. Puzzlement gave way to surprise and something else. What was it?

He stopped abruptly, one hand resting on the table, his deep gray eyes fixed upon her face, white as snow against the dark paneling.

"I am sorry, I have come home to love you, Norman," she whispered. Then she hung her head, not daring to look into his beloved face.

"Afraid? Afraid of me? Why, I have been waiting for you all these years!"

Safe in her husband's arms once more, Genet Saville knew that her greatest punishment would lie in the knowledge that she had brought sorrow to him.

Scotland's "Daft Days."

So hilarious were the old ceremonies of welcoming the new year in Scotland that Dec. 31 and Jan. 1 won for themselves the designation of "the daft days." Temperance legislation has done much in recent years to moderate and refine the festivities, which still, however, assume extensive and exuberant proportions. Only a few years ago a writer in the London Chronicle in Edinburgh on New Year's eve saw the "Black Maria" perambulating the streets and picking up the hopelessly drunken persons from the pavements and doorsteps for conveyance to the police station.

It was formerly the custom in Ireland and Wales to carry a lantern tastefully decorated with ribbons and containing a wren, round each hamlet and village on New Year's day and make calls on dwellers in cottage and hall. The bearers, swinging the lantern at each door, would favor all whom it might concern with a song and receive a monetary reward.

The Old Time Stagecoach.

In 1762 there were, strange as it seems, only six stagecoaches running in all England, and of course these were the only public vehicles for travelers. Even these were a novelty, and a person named John Crossett thought they were such a dangerous innovation that he wrote a pamphlet against them.

"These coaches," he wrote, "make gentlemen come to London upon every small occasion, which otherwise they would not do except upon urgent necessity. Nay, the convenience of the passage makes their wives come often up, who rather than come such long journeys on horseback would stay at home. Then when they come to town they must be in the wade, get fine clothes, go to plays and treats and by these means get such a habit of idleness and love of pleasure that they are uneasy after."

Roast Pig In Serbia.

The favorite dish of the Serbians, says a writer in the Wide World Magazine, consists of a lamb or sucking pig roasted whole over ashes. A pit is first dug and filled with wood-vine branches for choice, as they give the best flavor—and the fire is then allowed to burn for several hours. The carcass is next impaled with a stout stick and slowly turned round and round over the embers. The result, after six hours' turning, is a very luscious meal, for all the gravy is kept in and the meat is unusually tender. No picnic in Serbia is considered complete without this delicacy. A story goes that on one of his campaigns Napoleon noticed a group of Serbian soldiers cooking meat in this way, whereupon he came up, inquired what they were doing, tasted the meat and was delighted with it.

Races of Mankind.

The races of mankind are five in number—white, yellow, brown, red and black, or the Caucasian, Mongolian, Malayan, Indian and negro. The interrelationships of these different breeds have been the subject of study with the specialists for ages, but the disputes are as numerous as they were when the study began. Whether the various races sprang from some one original race and if so what that original race was, is a question that is still in limbo. Between these five races, as found at present, there are physical, moral and mental differences so marked as to seem to preclude a common origin and yet, unless such origin is assumed, the difficulty of the case is greatly enhanced. Race origins are an unsolved problem.—New York American.

Rainbows That Can Change Sex.

In many parts of the world it is the general belief that the rainbow has the power to change sex. This queer belief obtains in such widely separated districts as South Africa and Norway and China and Australia. The Zulus have a long folklore story of the young man who was changed into a wrinkled old woman by touching the many hued arch. The Scandinavian peasants have a similar story, and in Greece they say that anybody who runs against the end of the rainbow will have his or her sex instantly changed. In France and India to pass under the rainbow has a similar effect.

Well Trained.

Old Lady (improving the occasion)—Ah, my poor man, you would not be in this position if you had received an early training in some trade or calling. Tramp—Don't you talk too sudden, about wot you don't know nothin' about, missus. No trainin', indeed! W'y, I was in prison afore I was fourteen.—London Mail.

Made His Hair Come Out.

Habitual Customer (to his barber)—Your confounded hair restorer has made my hair come off more than ever! Barber—Ab, you must 'ave put too much on, sir! Made the 'air come right out, 'stead of only 'arfway.—Windsor Magazine.

His Philosophy.

Employer—I see you've collected a lot of small accounts, but you haven't made much headway with the bigger ones. Collector—No, sir; I generally make it a rule to—b—m—follow along the line of least resistance.—Chicago Tribune.

There Are Cooks and Cooks.

A lady correspondent remarks cynically that many a man who would hesitate to make a wife of his cook is quite ready to make a cook of his wife.—London Standard.
